Report. ISPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.1

Madison, Wis., July 22.-Amend nents to the workmen's compensation law of 1911 are recommended by the Wisconsin industrial commission in its first annual report made public today. After recounting the substantial benefits accomplished for workmen and employers in the year from July 1, employers in the year from 1911, to June 20, 1912, the commission advocates several changes looking to greater ease in administration.

Compensation under the Wisconsin law is based on loss of wage. Of this phase the report says:

"Theoretically this is the principle, but in order to secure simpler administration it may be well to adopt the New Jersey plan for cer-tain definable injuries. For instance, the New Jersey law provides as com-pensation for the loss of a great toe 50 percent of the dally wage during thirty weeks; for the loss of an eye 50 consider this matter with the view of possible amendment to our law."

De-appear that the best interest of the neen's answer to a question whether employe will be subserved thereby. It he would support President Taft or payment were made in gross, it is argued, the employe often would return to work sooner and his efficiency would be relatively higher.

The report notes that there has been little evidence of fictious claims by workers under the act, that there is not as much malingering as under the would support Roosevelt undoubtedly old liability scheme, that the safety he would have resigned as the nombranch of the service is tending to the branch of the service is tending to the circuit court to review and set aside before the senate judiciary committee lessening of accidents, and that when employers carry their own risk they

TOILS TIGHTENING ABOUT THE GUILTY IN ROSENTHAL CASE

Commissioner Dougherty Expects Ar rest Today of Several Others Implicated in Gambler's

[RY ASSUCIATED PRESS.]

New York, July 22.-The Rosenthal case is near to its solution. That is the helief of deputy police commissioner Dougherty who expects today to arrest two or three gun men and gangsters who were hired to kill Rosenthal before the gambler could disclose more secrets of the relations between the gambers and police.

Sweated and grilled by a fierce third degree, Jack Sullivan a former newsboy, held as a material witness and a Sam Paul, the east side gang leader, large majority and comes to a vote in the upper chamber Friday.

It virtually would extend the provision of the corporation tax to all persons and co-partnerships "doing the corporation tax to all persons and co-partnerships "doing the corporation tax to all persons and co-partnerships "doing the corporation tax to all persons and co-partnerships "doing the corporation tax to all persons and co-partnerships "doing the corporation tax to all persons and co-partnerships the corporation tax to all persons are consistent to the corporation tax to all persons a men, Sullivan and Paul, were taken into custody last night along with "Bridgey" Weber, the gambler.

Detectives have learned enough of the case to admit that the gun men on the mayal appropriation bill held were gathered together on Monday night and taken to Weber's poker room where the final arrangements for the killing of Rosenthal were perfected. Weber denies all knowledge of the shooting.

Plans to kill Rosenthal were laid on the excursion trip of the Sam Paul association. Rosenthal had been talking too much. Some well known gun ing too much. Some well known gun men and black jackers were along on that excursion trip and the detectives now know that "Bald Jack" Rose and "Bridgey" Weber were also on board the etempor. the steamer.

It was the day that Rosenthal threatened to tell more about how police grafted on gambling houses that the word was passed around that he must be made away with.

Six men are now in custody in the Rosenthal case, one of whom is held as a material witness, and five others charged with being implicated in the crime. Commissioner Dougherty however says that not one of the men who killed the gambler is under arrest. killed the gambler is under arrest.

The grand jury also will take up the charges that the police profited on gambling houses by permitting them to run without molestation.

Murderers Escaping.

That the murderers of Hermann Rosenthal have been slipping quietly out of town for the last few days is now the belief of detectives who have been asked to pick up certain gun men whose names have been given to the police officials. That a picked band of gun men was selected to shoot down Rosenthal has been learned by offiials of the prosecutors and that they have had a rehearsal of the killing is

He is supported in his statement by disinterested witnesses who noticed how empty the thorougfare was and commented on it. Shapiro's statement was obtained by the district attorney. He said that at least sixteen men must have known of the "croak" that was to be pulled off as they were in front of the Metropole ready to "black jack" or kill if necessary anyone who interferred with the job or tried to block the get away of the gun fighters

There were reports today that "Bald Jack" Rose had "squealed" and that Commissioner Dougherty was in possession of all the names of those who were in the murder car.

Dougherty has promised important arrests today, but further than that will not discuss the case. "Big Jack" Selig, gun man and gaug leader will

CHANCE FOR WILSON SEEN IN WISCONSIN

Dissatisfaction in La Follette and Stalwart Camps Gives Confidence to Democrats.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 22.-The Wisconsin Democracy has discovered two political agencies at work which it be lieves will ensure the complete electoral vote for Woodrow Wilson in November. First of these is the pre-sumption that the La Follette faction, which is in the ascendancy in this state, will not vote for electors who will cast their votes for President Taft. The second presumption is that the Stalwarts will not vote for the Republican electors who are selected by a La Follette state central committee because they believe these electors would violate precedent and instead of voting for Taft might cast their vote for La Follette.

This, it is clamled, would result in both the Stalwart and La Follette fac-tions casting their vote for Wilson presidential electors. Credence for the belief that the La Follette men Endorsement of the republican nathe belief that the La rouette men will support Wilson came with the issue of La Follette's magazine last the senator's weekly does not endorse Wilson in so many words, endorse Wilson in so many words, and the senator's respectively and the senator of the senat but prints a large picture of the New Jersey governor on the front of the magazine. The Stalwarts consider this a covert attempt to tip off the of a spirited campaign in behalf of La Follette faction to vote for Wilson without the senator's having to go on Men prominent in Republican councils in the state have received letters from the different Republican presidential electors seeking information whether the latter felt they would be in duty bound to vote for the Republican nominee in the event of their election. One of the clerks at the legislative reference library has made an examination of historical precedents, and has been unable to discover any case where an elector violated the obligation imposed upon him. It was the knowledge of this fact by some of the electoral candidates which caused two resignations and a statement of an elector at large that he too would resign if the Republican party expected him to vote for Taft if elected. It was first believed that only two or three electors would resign, but members of the Republican state central committee have received information that indicates dissatisfaction among all the electoral dates. For this reason it is believed the committee will postpone its meeting until after the primaries.

OPPOSES PRESENT LAW.

It would appear as though candidate John C. Karel, one of the demochair, has taken for granted the state law, which prescribes how the plat-form of the various parties is to be decided upon is to be followed out decided upon, is to be followed out eleven years ago. Perhaps the bases by the democratic party and that the recent convention in Milwaukee was merely advisory as it were. At any rate Judge Karel returns from his western trip and makes public the following announcement of his campaign against the present primary law and the principles he stands for.

"A clear majority of the accredited delegates to the Democratic state convention having declared in my favor as their candidate for the office of ly retaliation within the power of the governor of this state, I will make an Canadlan government. ### Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Do you remember the legend about that ancient Greek from whom Apolle took "the backward looking mind?" All things became new.

The change was not in the world, but in the Greek. His mind had been turned backward to the happiness and the grief of the past. Now be looked outward and forward to the beauty and the joy all about him.

In our day is no Apollo to take away the backward looking mind, more's the pity.

But the symbolism holds. Many, of us need to have our minds reversed.

I know a woman who persists in looking backward and who always tells of a day when her people were rich and accustomed to many luxuries she is now denied. She is constantly deploring a situation she cannot help. She does not live save in a former day. Worse than Lot's wife, who took a single look over her shoulder, she always faces backward.

I know a man whose constant theme of regret is the fact that he ever changed his business. He did well, he says, at the old place and was a fool to change. Certainly he is doing little good at his new place, largely for the reason that he is forever harking backward to the old.

He needs an Apollo. Older persons are apt to foster the backward looking habit. Says grandpa from his chimney corner: "There are no days like the good old days.

Now, when I was young"-Poor grandpa! He magnifies the past, minimizes the present and omits the future. He is dying, like some trees, at the top. You cannot change the past, but you can discount the present and spoil the future by refusing to live in the one and to face the other. To be successful, to stay young, to fied happiness, cultivate the outward

A library for children is a compara tively new thing in London. A new one in Manresa-road, Chelsea, is model of its kind. It had its origin in a boys' room, concerning which Earl Cadogan, when he opened it made the flerce joke that "as everyone knows, a boy's room is better than his company." Out of this boys' room grew the children's library, a place of deep silence, where boys and girls meet for the common pursuit of knowl edge.

Poor Excuse for Absence. Women have tried to excuse their absence from the breakfast table on the plea that they never look their best in the early morning hours. But beauty is superfluous at breakfast save when it manifests itself in the cunning red and white of bacon, in the delicate aroma of coffee or the translucent amber of marmalade or honey. Our aesthetic sensibilities are not fully awake till the afternoon.

Ring-Brothers, nor any other circus has thus far applied for a license to in this city, and on the other hand the license fee was raised from $50 to $150 by the late common council a short time before it passed out of existence. This act was justified on the score that the wear and tear on the unpaved streets by the heavy circus wagons was far from paid for by the lower fee, not to mention the expense to which the city is put for additional policemen. A number of years ago the license was $100 but was educed in order that the members of the council and their friends might be provided with more complimentary tic kets. As many as seventy-five tickets have been asked for, not including the favors to the police and fire depart-ments. TENNESSEE LAD IS WILSON'S MASCOT

Byrd Douglas Cain

At the Baltimore convention there was no more ardent and intense Wilson booster than fair-haired nine-year-old Byrd Douglas Cain, of Nash-ville, Tenn, Having inherited political propensities from his father, Walter Cain, a southern newspaper man, Douglas went to the convention to boost his choice. In his white suit decorated with Wilson buttons and bands, he became very popular with the delegates and the Wilson promoters. When Wilson began to get the lead in the voting several big delegates carried Douglas around the hais on their shoulders and hechered himself hoarse for his favorite.

The Evening Chit-Chat BY RUTH CAMERON

ON FAVORITE WORDS OME time ago I wrote a little talk about the words in the English language which I particularly loved. When I had written this I hesitated about publishing it after all because I was afraid that there would hardly be enough interest in it to the average reader. How much I was mistaken has been proved by the large number of letters which come to me expressing interest in this subject, and telling me the writer's favorite words. To make a full list of all these would not be ble, but the interest in this subject seems to be so widespread that I have made a partial list. It is difficult to tell sometimes whether it is the sound or the meaning of a word which makes it beloved. Evidently the contributors to this list were influenced by both considerations.

The word "home" most emphatically heads the list. If this were a voting contest, "home" would certainly be elected the most beloved word in the English language. Needless to say, "mother" was a close second. One reader pertinently called attention to the gulf between the beautiful word "mother" and its ungracious and unmelodious substitutes "mamma" and ward in the present life as well as a fruition in the life to come, and is a profitable investment for childhood, youth, maturity, and old age, was the theme of the Rev. T. W. Williams, pastor of the Cargill Methodist church, who at the union service in Presbyterian church last evening preached a sermon on the subject, "Godliness Pays." He took as his text the eighth verse of the fourth chapter of Paul's first epistle to Tim-

Other words which were favorites with a good many people were:

PROFITABLE INVESTMENT FOR YOUTH, MATURITY, OLD AGE, AND FUTURE.

"Paul," began the Rev. Williams in opening his discourse, "is emphasizing the power of godliness by way of contrast. It is our way of emphasizing traits of character and strength constructing a contrast. We set by constructing a contrast, we set for the characteristics of fertile soil by comparing it with that which is unproductive, explain civilization by contrasting it with savagery, and by contrasting it with savagery, and illustrate and make plain the joy of conversion by contrasting it with the despair and depravity of sin. Faul here constructs a contrast to show the power of godly living.

"In our text Paul contrasts godliness with he Olympic games. He evidenly saw nothing in the games to call forth the great attention that they were given. He seems to have "Godliness is a good investment in the life we now live. It promises and gives rich dividends which grow and accumulate until they reach their full day of judgment. I am reminded of the man who when asked by his book-keeper where he should put his payment for new rent told him that;

Paul thought of godliness as a means of continual sustenance, of every day help. He believed that godlines are as follows:

"First there is the period of child-hood. The child has a remarkable power to receive spiritual truth; its power of assimilation is seldom susfeeted by most of us. The child reared in a Christian home is to be congratulated, for Its opportunities in life are greatly enhanced and su perior to those of children less fortu nate. It is the command of God to train the child in the way he should go, and as the twig is bent so the tree

"Not long ago a child welfare con ference was held in the city of Mil-waukee. It was attended by public chical templars Sunday school school teachers, Sunday school teachers, settlement workers, repre sentatives of corrective institutions and all were agreed, and expressed the belief that the child reared in a Christian home has a better chance to become an upright citizen and val-uable member of society than one not thus favored. From the stand-not thus tayored. From the standpoint of the child, godliness is profitable unto all things.

"The next period is that of youth,
the period of awakening interests, of habit formation, of character building. At this time are moulded the moral and intellectual creations which are to last through life. It is the time when young people choose their vocations. A reputation for goddiness is then found to be of great value. It is prized in all positions of trust and responsibility, and its rewards are great. One who has not the traits of honesty, reliability, and intregrity, has a ball and chain about his feet, and his progress is retarded and hampered.

retarded and hampered. "Coming close upon youth is the period of home-making. No home can become what it should be without God. You may have an elegant residence, abundance of means, and all material wants satisfied, but if passions are unrestrained and burst out in storms and veritable cyclones of demestic strife, home is a mere mockery.

The pastor went on to relate several incidents of domestic infelicity to support his contention, among them a story of a wealthy parishoner who told his pastor to send all bills for the improvement of the church

"This man evidently thought the church was a society for the pre-vention of cruelty to husbands."

"Maturity is the time for the carry-ing of heavy burdens. Men and women load themselves down with cares and responsibilities; sometimes they fall beneath their burdens, and cease to struggle. Now more than ever before is godliness profitable to encourage strengthen, and sustain them as they pass over the dry and desert places. Do businessmen believe in the wearing qualities of Christianity, in its application to practical affairs? One hundred and thirty five of the greatest business men of this country, in response to the inquiries of a religious paper, testified that godliness is profitable. Among them were John Wanaker, the late Marshall Field, and scores of others little less famous.

"As life wanes there comes on the period of old age. There is an effort on the part of some people to evade old age. The spirit has been maniold age. "In old age the dividends of Godliness are beginning to accumulate, "At least, as earthly time is num-bered, comes the period of death bered, comes the period of death, Godliness that fails in this hour is as a bridge that breaks in mid-stream. It is false and hollow if it gives not assurance of the life to come For assurance of the life to come. For what lies beyond we have but the testimony of saints in the midst of the passage to the life eternal, and the inspired visions of hold writ. The apostle John assures us that sin's blight and pollution shall be no more that sorrow is not there, not hunger, not thirst, but in its stead the hap-piness that passeth undertanding."

444444444111111111111111444 And they separated, both saying, "Till this evening."

On the morning following the evening so fondly anticipated by both Porthos and D'Artagnan, Athos sat chewing the cud of recollection, in which the bitter somewhat predominated over the sweet; when his meditations were pleasingly interrupted by the appearance of D'Artagnan. We say pleasingly because Athos took particular pleasure in the society of the frank, abrewd Gascon.

As to the Gascon, he was in exuberant spirits, but spirits which to the cool, observant eye of Athos seemed rather feverish than natural.

"This seems to have been an auspiclous night with yon, D'Artagnan," said Athos. "Did you visit your fascinating Englishwoman?"

"Oh, yes," replied D'Artagnan, rub-bing his hands, "and my revenge is complete. I will tell you all, and then you may judge for yourself." And with his usual readiness and fluency the Gascon related to his attentive friend the adventures of the evening. In the first place he recapitulated all that our readers know concerning the lady's warm letters to De Wardes and D'Artagnan's forged reply. At this period Athos' brow became clouded.

"But proceed," added be gravely. "Well, I perceived my billet had done its work. At 10 o'clock milady began to be uneasy. She arose, walked about, sat down again, her eyes seeming constantly to reproach the sluggish progress of the pendulum. At length, as the time drew near, there was no mistaking her. Her looks said distinctly as words, 'You have been very agreeable, but it is quite time you were gone.' I arose, took my hat, bowed upon her hand, even ventured to kiss it, all which she not only allowed, but I was astonished to find her beautiful fingers return the respectful pressure of mine. And yet, though the fascination still continued, I was not for a moment deceived. There was no par tiality for me, not even coquetry in it. 'She must love him,' thought I as I descended the stairs.

"But my poor little Kitty could not and it in her heart to come down to meet me. I was obliged to grope my way up the back staircase alone. "On reaching the girl's little apart ment I found her seated with her head leaning on her hands, weeping bitterly Milady, in the delirium of her joy, had revealed to her the contents of the supposed De Wardes' billet and had given her a purse of money.

"Kitty on regaining her chamber had thrown this purse contemptuously into a corner, where it lay, disgorging three or four pieces of gold.

"From some little remains of modesty, milady had ordered all the lights to be lowered, even in her own chamber, and M. de Wardes was to depart before day in darkness. "I had not been many minutes with Kitty before we heard milady enter she became livid. She crushed the pa-her chamber, and I quickly ensconced per, and Kitty, fearing she was go-suppressed voice.

"Well, why does he not come in?" said milady.

"Shaking off poor Kitty with as much kindness as I could, I made my way into milady's chamber. And here, dear Athos, I must confess that I scarcely knew which predominated, love or jealousy. Her love for De he did not come. Wardes seems boundless."

"Call it not love, D'Artagnan," said Athos, "it is a desecration of the word.

"At parting she forced this ring upon my finger with a request that I would return her a token of responding affection today, and people don't give such jewels as this away lightly. My heart smote me, and I wished to refuse it. She, however, would not hear of that, but replied, 'No, no; keep that ring for my sake. You will render me likewise a greater service than you are aware of by doing so,' and her voice was agitated as she spoke. What the latter part of her speech meant I don't know, but she is full of mysteries. The ring is, as you see, a magnificent sapphire, surrounded by brilliants. She ndded:

"'Poor dear angel, whom the monster of a Gascon was so near killing. Do you suffer much from your wounds?

"'Yes, a great deal,' said I.
"Be satisfied,' murmured she. will avenge you and cruelly.'

"'Whew!' thought I to myself, 'the time for confidence has not yet come!' At our parting another interview was agreed upon for next week."

"Your milady is doubtless an infamous creature. But, since you mentioned it, my attention has been engrossed by your ring," said Athos. "It reminds me of a family jewel. I did not think two sapphires of such a fine ber orders; but he did not dare to water existed. And she gave you that write for fear of not being able, to ring, do you say?",
"Yes, my beautiful Englishwoman, or, rather, Frenchwoman, for I am sure she was born in France, took it from her own finger and forced it on to mine.

"Pray," said Athes after a minute, "either take off that ring or turn the collet inside. It recalls such recollections that I cannot keep my head cool enough to converse with you. But lady: "Observe to nobody." stop, let me look at that ring again. The one I mentioned to you had one of have done with her, she terrifies me."

Athos bowed to D'Artagnan, like a man who wishes to be left alone with his thoughts.

On reaching home D'Artagnan found fair inconstant, and be disposed to Kitty waiting for him. She was sent by her mistress to the false De Wardes. Her mistress was mad with love; she wished to know when her lover would meet her again. The counsels of his friend, joined to the cries of his own heart, made him determine, now his pride was saved and his vengeance satisfied, not to see milady again. As a reply he wrote the following letter: Do not depend upon me, madame, for the next meeting. Since my convalescence I have so many affairs of this kind on my hands that I am forced to regulate them a little. When your turn comes I shall have the honor to inform you of it. I kiss your hands.

DE WARDES.

Not a word about the ring. D'Artagnan gave the open letter to Kitty, who at first was unable to comprehend it, but who became almost wild with joy on reading it a second time. She ran back to the Place Royale.

Milady opened the letter with eagerness, but at the first words she read ing to faint, hastened toward her and was beginning to open her dress, but milady started up, pushing her away.
"What do you want with me?" said

"I thought you were going to faint,

The next morning, when Kitty presented herself at D'Artagnan's residence with a letter, she was no longer the two preceding days, but on the contrary, as sad as possible.

This letter was in milady's hand writing, only this time it was addressed to M. d'Artaguan, and not to M. de Wardes.

He opened it and read as follows:

Dear M. d'Artagnan-It is wrong thus bear M. d'Artagnan—It is wrong thus to neglect your friends, particularly at the moment you are about to leave them for so long a time. My brother-in-law and myself expected you yesterday and the day before, but in vain. Will it be the same this evening? Your very grateful LADY CLARIK.

"Will you go?" asked Kitty.

D'Artagnan promised Kitty to remain insensible to the seductions of milady and desired her to tell her mistress that he could not be more grateful for her kindnesses than he was, and that he would be obedient to such experienced eyes as those of milady, to disguise his writing sufficiently.

As 9 o'clock struck D'Artagnan was at the Place Royale. "Show him in," said milady in a quick tone, but so piercing that D'Artagnan heard her in the antechamber. He was introduced.

"I am at home to nobody," said mi-

D'Artagnan cast an inquiring glance at milady. She was pale, and her eyes looked red, either from tears or want, D'Artagnan took off the ring, giving of sleep. The number of lights had it again to Athos.

"Avenge me of that infamous De Wardes," said milady to herself, "and shall soon know how to get rid of you, double fool, living sword blade!"

"Fall voluntarily into my arms," said D'Artagnan, likewise to himself, "after having abused me with such effrontery, hypocritical, dangerous woman, and afterward I will laugh at you with him whom you wish me to kill." "I am ready," said he aloud.

"You have understood me, then, dear M. d'Artagnan," said milday, "and you would employ on my account your arm, which has already acquired so much "Instantly!"

"But," said he, as he retired as quickly as possible from the reproaches of Kitty, "but I must not play the fool this is certainly a very bad woman I must be upon my guard."

He walked six or seven times around the Place Royale, turning at every ten steps to look at the light in milady's apartment, which was to be seen through the blinds; it was evident that this time the young woman was not in such haste to retire to her apartment as she had been the first. At length the light disappeared.

With this light was extinguished the last irresolution in the heart of D'Artagnan. With a beating heart and brain on fire he re-entered the house and flew toward Kitty's chamber.

The poor girl, pale as death and trembling in all her limbs, wished to delay her lover, but milady, with her ear on the watch, had heard the noise D'Artagnan had made and, opening the
